From: Director of Naval Intelligence
To: U. S. Naval Attache, Taipei

Subj: Exchange of intelligence with NGRC

Ref: (a) DNI Secret ltr Ser 00971P32 of 22 Apr 1953
(b) CINCPAC Secret ltr Ser 0087 of 23 May 1953

Encl: (1) List of ONI documents available for "quid pro quo" exchange of naval intelligence with NGRC

1. Recent communications from U. S. Naval Attache, Taipei indicate that difficulty has been encountered in implementing the exchange authorized by reference (a) due, apparently, to a lack of suitable material available to the Naval Attache for release.

2. In recent months two separate channels for exchange of intelligence with the Ministry of National Defense, National Government of the Republic of China have been authorized. One exchange is on an individual service basis as authorized by the three military intelligence agency heads and is effected through the service attaches. The other is on a joint basis as authorized by the Joint Intelligence Committee and is effected through the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific. In reference (b) CINCPAC recommended that all items of intelligence be exchanged through the U. S. Naval Attache and Naval Attache for Air to China.

3. Enclosure (1) lists items of naval intelligence from which ONI considers the Naval Attache may select certain items for release, in whole or in part, provided that the Attache determines that they satisfy the requirements set forth in reference (a). Those items not previously made available to U. S. Naval Attache, Taipei have been forwarded under separate cover for consideration. Newly produced studies and publications which ONI considers may be potential source material for subject exchange will, in the future, be distributed to the Naval Attache for similar exchange consideration. Where the Naval Attache does not have and is not cognizant of the existence of intelligence which he considers appropriate for exchange, he may request such intelligence from the Office of Naval Intelligence, describing his requirements in detail.

4. Material marked "Special Handling Required, Not Releasable to Foreign Nationals" may not be released without reference to the originator. In
